

Harmonic Resonance

Acrylic, Pastel on Canvas
145cm x 110cm

Harmonic Resonance explores balance not as stillness, but as vibration. Through mirrored symmetry and fluid gesture, the work holds movement and restraint in dynamic tension, suggesting that harmony emerges from calibration rather than control. Layered pigments and organic forms evoke both inner psychological states and geological processes, collapsing the boundary between interior and landscape.

Rooted in the concept of my own hybrid identity, the painting reflects a Heraclitean understanding of coexistence — where opposites remain in relation without cancelling one another. Subtle instabilities within the symmetry resist fixed meaning, inviting sustained contemplation. The work proposes resonance over resolution, offering a quiet meditation on interconnectedness, perception, and the generative potential of contradiction.
